Good Interface

The new Windows 10 window selector is a good interface because it allows the user to change the tab while previewing it before opening. It also allows the users to watch its previous tabs and re-open them. For me, this design is very helpful.

Bad Interface

The new Facebook update has placed the tabs on the top of the screen. For users with big smartphones (as it is usual this times) it is very hard to reach the tabs without using two hands.

I believe this tab selection should be made on the bottom of the page like it was previously.

Also in my opinion, the tab selector should not contain more than 3 options.
